Сна. 1.

Though my first's a single thing,
Yet many hundreds from it spring,
To men and animals a treat,
For each will freely of it eat.
Aow I declare it is a flower
That sweetly scents the verdant bower
And when Aurora's tints are spread,
Behold my second leave its bed;
Undannted by a sense of fear,
Its courage now will soon appear;
For, when contesting for a prize,
It never yields, though sometimes lies.
My whole, I now beg leave to say,
Is always deck'd in gay array.

CHA. 2.

Did they but know how great a prize
My first, well used, would send;
Those mortals now who most despise,
Would claim it for their friend.

But the 'tless youth too soon is pleas'd And apt to wander wrong; And by my second's aid gets eas'd Of that which seem'd so long.

And you, ye fair, who trifling spend
The fleeting hours of time,
The warning of my whole attend,
And so improve your prime.

ATKINS'S AUTOMATON REAPER ON EXHIBITION AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE.

"Half an hoar age, your highness," replied the Nubian.

"Then I will go and await their report ere I leave for the camp."

Touching his fine Arabian with the spur, the spirited animal sprang forward at a gallop, and the others following, were soon out of sight-

Never was a man more completely bewildered than was Consul Orloff. In vain did he seek to unravel the tangled web, but could not gain any satisfactory clue. Lavalette did not return—he heard nothing more of Manasseh—and there was, evidently, a plot for his forcible abduction. His heart sunk within him, as he balanced his chances of escape, of solvency, and he sat at the window until sleep cast her comforting mantle over him.

The morning gan boomed from the citadel, and the restless dreamer started. Were the events of the past night, which rapidly flashed through his mind, realities!—or did he yet dream? Alas! he was yet a prisoner; and the rising sun greeted him as he looked from the window—while the street below was filled by Turks, summoned to their morning devotions by the "muezzins," calling the faithful to prayer from the galleries of the mosque-minarets. It was no dream, and he looked about for some way to escape. The lock of the door was put on the inner-side, and with the aid of a table-knife, which he found in the closet, he soon tain Maxwell seldom joined them, except at the tab thus basked unrestrained in the bright sunshine of H without even thinking whether its glad warmth wo affection to perfect fruition, or whether dark clouds in and cloud the horizon of his hopes. The ver fairer than it ever had before; and his pulse throbb toxicating delirium as he experienced the delights est of all emotions-first love. He who has not me bads of happiness, has lost a bright chapter from collections-cherished thoughts, which (as another l expressed it) come to us on their golden pinions fro of time, and sing, with their voices of melody to the dancing girls, they scatter rose leaves upon our pa our hearts with feelings that can never die. Cond other thought, it comes, like a dream at midnight, the sleeping mystery of the mind, and glowing it beauty of its own presence. Even in after years, w steps of crime crush the fragments of memory, the the fragrance of its first passion, "like a vase in whi once been distilled." Its possessor may stand like the overthrow of hopes, and the ruins of friendshi lightful souvenirs of "first love," like "the scent of linger there still."
